Trump's tech hiring ban: India's chance to redefine global

US President Donald Trump has urged American tech giants like Google, Microsoft, and Apple to stop hiring foreign workers, including those from India, and focus instead on creating jobs in the United States. His words sent ripples across the global tech landscape.

At an AI Summit held in Washington on Wednesday, Trump said that American companies should now put national interests first in the fast-growing field of artificial intelligence. Although there has been no official policy announcement, this adds to the growing uncertainty for Indian professionals, as India plays a key role in the global operations of U.S. tech firms. Recent reports indicate that major U.S. tech firms are lobbying against strict hiring bans. For many, it felt like a betrayal—a nation that has long powered global innovation now faces exclusion.

But what if this moment is India's chance to rewrite its story? Rather than a setback, Trump's directive could ignite India's ascent as a self-reliant tech superpower, proving it can innovate not just for the West but for the world.

Trump's remarks tap into a broader narrative of economic nationalism, one that paints foreign talent—particularly India's vast pool of engineers—as a drain on American jobs. This is no small matter. U.S. tech companies have been establishing engineering hubs in cities like Bengaluru and Hyderabad for decades, and India is a vital part of their global operations. Yet Trump's statement, aimed at boosting

Why India must reject US demands to cut Russian oil

India's position in the post-Ukraine war energy order has been pivotal. Since 2022, it has emerged as one of Russia's top two crude buyers, importing 1.7 to 1.9 million barrels per day at sustained discounts to Brent. These flows have been central to stabilising domestic energy costs, containing inflation, and protecting fiscal space. Yet this strategic advantage is now directly under attack from an explicitly political campaign by Washington.

On August 7, US President Donald Trump issued an executive order imposing an additional 25 per cent tariff on Indian goods, citing that India "directly or indirectly" imports Russian oil. The tariff, which will take effect 21 days later, is not a marginal measure. It targets a strategic partner in a manner no other major Russian oil buyer—notably China—has faced. Trump's framing is unambiguous: India's energy decisions are being weaponised in the broader US campaign against Moscow. This is the first time a U.S. president has linked trade penalties so explicitly to India's crude import mix, making the move as much a test of India's sovereignty as of its economic resilience.

The irony is that this pressure comes amid fluid US-Russia negotiations. Trump has publicly claimed "great progress" in talks between his special envoy and President Vladimir Putin, while simultaneously preparing secondary sanctions.

Israel and Palestine: Two-state solution looks good only on paper

"Shalom, chaver (Goodbye, friend)," Bill Clinton said in his eulogy as hundreds of world leaders, including 80 heads of state, gathered at Jerusalem's Mount Herzl cemetery on November 6, 1995. Two days ago, two shots from a Beretta 94F at a peace rally in support of the Oslo Accords, the first major attempt at achieving peace between Israelis and Palestinians, at Tel Aviv's Kings of Israel Square shattered hopes and revealed hate's ugly face.

Israeli PM Yitzhak was assassinated by Yigal Amir, an Israeli law student and ultranationalist vehemently opposed to the Oslo Accords, which intended to pave the way for a two-state solution.

Clinton said, "Your Prime Minister was a martyr for peace, but he was a victim of hate."

"Rabin, one of the architects of the Oslo Accords, had ruled the right-wing Opposition, especially the Benjamin Netanyahu-led Likud and pro-settler rabbis.

The core issue of the peace process, the Israel Defence Forces (IDF) phased withdrawal from Palestinian territories, like Gaza and Jericho (West Bank), triggered massive protests. Rabin, dubbed anti-Jewish, was compared to Adolf Hitler and his Labour party to the Nazis.

The Oslo Accords never mentioned a two-state solution and only provided a framework for creating self-governing Palestinian institutions in the West Bank and Gaza. However, it was enough to trigger massive protests against Rabin as Palestinian self-governance in Gaza and the West Bank would have meant the IDF's withdrawal from those occupied territories.

The last major attempt for peace and to establish a Palestinian state, the 2000 Camp David Summit, between Clinton, Arafat and Israeli PM Ehud Barak, also failed due to differences over the status of Jerusalem.

Support for a two-state solution grows

The concept of a two-state solution dates back to the 1937 British Peel Commission report. Since then, the idea has made news several times only to be confined to international fora, discussions and dialogues.

Palestine is recognised as a state by 174 of the 193 UN member states—75 per cent of the international community. More than 80 countries recognised Palestine as an independent state following PLO chairman Yasser Arafat's proclamation on November 15, 1988.

Ten more countries formally recognised Palestine amid the ongoing Israel-Hamas war: Mexico, Armenia, Slovenia, Ireland, Norway, Spain, the Bahamas, Trinidad and Tobago, Jamaica and Barbados.

However, the UN recognition is a farce. Palestine has only a "Permanent Observer State" status, meaning it is part of proceedings but can't vote on resolutions.

Palestine can only vote on UN resolutions if it is accorded the status of an independent state, like other nations.

Benjamin Netanyahu, the longest-serving Israeli PM and who heads the most hard-line right-wing coalition, is a staunch opponent of the concept, which he thinks will be a "launchpad to annihilate Israel".

Support for a two-state solution is gathering momentum again due to the humanitarian crisis in Gaza, caused by the Israeli military operation since October 2023. After Israel's military operation, which has killed more than 58,000 Palestinians, Gaza is on the brink of famine as the IDF cutoffs the entry of food convoys into the coastal enclave.

According to the Integrated Food Security Phase Classification (IPC) platform, two out of three famine thresholds have been reached in Gaza; plummeting food consumption and acute malnutrition.

Data provided by Cogat, the Israeli agency that still controls aid shipments, and IPC show that Gaza needs 62,000 tonnes of staple food monthly to meet basic needs. No food trucks were allowed into Gaza in March and April. Only 19,153 tonnes were allowed in May, 37,103 in June and 37,906 in July.

Consequently, Gaza's whole population, around 2.1 million, is food insecure. Per the Gaza health ministry, 900,000 children are going hungry and 70,000 already show signs of malnutrition.

In a meeting in New York, all children under the age of five—around 320,000—are at risk of life-threatening malnourishment.

The deteriorating situation has triggered global opprobrium against Israel and Netanyahu with several nations calling for a ceasefire, announcing to recognise Palestinian state and demanding a two-state solution to end the problem forever.

French President Emmanuel Macron has announced that his country will officially recognise a Palestinian state at the 80th UN General Assembly (UNGA) meeting in New York in September. British PM Keir Starmer has also said that the UK will recognise Palestine's statehood if Israel doesn't end the war and has set a September deadline.

Canadian PM Mark Carney also joined France and the UK to announce that it would recognise a Palestinian statehood at the UNGA in September.
